

Support Seattle Children's nurses' fight for excellent patient care and against union-busting bargaining.

Seattle Children's wants to:

- End employer-paid health insurance
- Erect barriers to justice in court for nurses who are sexually or racially harassed, denied their breaks, or unjustly fired
- Undermine union power by excluding nurses from the contract and abolishing long-held union security rights
- Have the union waive nurses' rights to rest and meal breaks instead of investing in break relief nurses to replace unsafe break practices
- Ignore practical fixes to retain experienced nurses in hard to fill positions
- Keep sick time accruals low, making it hard for nurses to stay home when they're sick
- Keep nurses' wages far below other West Coast children's hospitals
