By Julia Weinberg, RN, WSNA President

Another new year is just beginning. Hope everyone enjoyed the holidays. More importantly, I hope you had a chance to rest and relax since it's shaping up to be a busy 2011.

Like many of you, my new 2011 calendar is already starting to fill up for the coming year.

I've saved the dates for WSNA Legislative Day, WSNA Convention, NFN meetings, ANA meetings and various WSNA council, committee, and board meetings too. I even managed to schedule some work days in there and set aside some time to spend with family and friends.

As 2010 was drawing to a close, I felt a sense of uncertainty, not knowing how the recent elections on the state and federal level would impact the coming year. This feeling weighed on me, so I tried to visualize the year ahead and get rid of that 'fog'. I am more convinced than ever that we, as nurses, must be leaders. There are opportunities for progress and growth, but we must seize them with focus, enthusiasm and hope.

Of course, one of the biggest issues impacting all of us in our practices and our personal lives is the continued implementation of health care reform. What changes are coming and what do they really mean for nurses and nursing? Who will be impacted and how will they benefit? Will reform change the health care needs of our patients? Will this law really begin change how we approach health and wellness or is it likely to be more of the status quo? These are good questions that all of us are asking.

We're already beginning to see some meaningful changes implemented. Insurance companies can no longer deny coverage to children due to pre-existing conditions. Children and young adults up to age 26 can stay on a parent's health plan. The prescription medication 'donut hole' for seniors is beginning to close. Visit ANA's health care reform page for details and timelines for implementation (<http://bit.ly/ANA-healthcare>).

I would also urge you to review the newly released paper 2010 National Health Care Reform: An Initial Overview of Opportunities for Nurses and Nursing in Washington State by WSNA's own Louise Kaplan, PhD, ARNP, RN. Visit the WSNA website for the executive summary and full report. WSNA commissioned this paper because we know that we need to anticipate and be in front of the changes occurring in health care. If you're interested in learning more about this work, make sure you check out Louise's CE session on April 29th at Convention titled "Drivers of Change – New Roles for Nurses in Health Systems and Communities".

Nurses must be involved in the implementation of health care reform at every level of decision making, from the bedside to Washington, DC. We are the ones who have the knowledge and the qualities to lead the country through this change – one that will certainly be lengthy, at times confusing, but ultimately rewarding.

As nurses, we make caring for others our highest priority, often even above our own needs. Our patients and the public know this. They trust us to place the interests of patients above all else. We demonstrate these leadership qualities within our written scope of practice, through our Code of Ethics, and also for over 100 years with ANA's Nursing and Healthcare Social Policies. It's one of the reasons why the Institute of Medicine's (IOM) report The Future of Nursing: Leading Change, Advancing Health calls upon nurses to be full partners, with physicians and other health professionals, in redesigning health care in the United States.

On November 30th, I had the opportunity to participate in the RWJF National Summit webinar on Advancing Health through Nursing, to discuss the implications of this recently released IOM report (see related articles in the Fall Washington Nurse and in this issue). While Washington State has made much progress on many of the recommendations contained in the IOM report, there is still much to do both here in Washington State and nationally, to fully implement these important recommendations.

This work will require much cooperation and collaboration among all nursing organizations and with key policymakers and stakeholders. We have a rich and successful history of doing this here in Washington and I am confident that we can come together and do it again and serve as a role model for other states!

As we look outward at the health care landscape, we can't turn away from continuing to improve ourselves and our own workplaces. Often there is so much disrepair and dysfunction within our own workplaces, even sometimes among our own working teams. We must find ways to really work together, collaborate, partner, and sometimes even forgive each other so that we can move on to healthier workplace relationships where we push ourselves and each other to be our best.

It really is up to each of us and it begins right now with this new year. I challenge each and every one of you right now to imagine what you can be and achieve next year. What do you want for our nursing profession and how will you make that happen? Are you ready to come together with other nurses and WSNA to face the challenges before us? How do you keep your hope and passion ignited and burning bright each and every day? Let's ask each other these questions and figure out how we can help our coworkers and friends keep that inner spark alive. We can be resources for each other and WSNA is a resource for all of us in this effort.

The new year has only just begun, but there is already so much to do. Time to roll up our sleeves and get working on the great opportunities and challenges ahead!

Happy New Year everyone!

DR. MARGARET HEITKEMPER RECEIVES FNINR PATHFINDER AWARD

Margaret Heitkemper of the University of Washington School of Nursing has been selected to receive the 2010 Friends of the National Institute of Nursing Research Pathfinder award. She has the honor of sharing this award with Dr. Suzanne Bakken from Columbia University. Dr. Heitkemper received this prestigious award at the FNINR NightinGala on Wednesday, September 29, 2010 in Washington D.C.

The Pathfinder Award is given by FNINR to acknowledge nurse researchers whose research has made a difference in the lives of people with health care needs, and has been sustained by multiple research grants from the National Institute of Nursing Research.

Dr. Heitkemper is the chair of the Department of Biobehavioral Nursing and Health Systems, School of Nursing, Elizabeth Sterling Soule Endowed Chair in Nursing, and Adjunct Professor, Division of Gastroenterology, School of Medicine, University of Washington. Dr. Heitkemper is also Director of the NIH/NINR-funded Center for Women's Health and Gender Research at the university.

Dr. Heitkemper's research related to women's health, stress, and gastrointestinal function has been continuously funded by NIH since 1983. Dr. Heitkemper is also one of the authors of a new book, "Master your IBS," from the American Gastroenterological Association (AGA) offering patients with irritable bowel syndrome (IBS) a variety of strategies to help them learn how to manage their IBS symptoms and achieve greater freedom from IBS.

IMPROVEMENTS TO LOAN REPAYMENT PROGRAM FOR ARNPS

The National Health Service Corps (NHSC) is a Federal program that helps nurse practitioners deal with their student debt, while addressing the current shortage of primary care practitioners. The NHSC repays student loans in exchange for service in rural or urban communities that have a shortage of primary medical, behavioral health and dental care workers. There are currently more than 1,300 nurse practitioners and nurse midwives serving in the NHSC.

The NHSC (nhsc.hrsa.gov) recently announced the opening of its 2011 loan repayment program. Provisions in the Affordable Care Act allowed the Corps to make several important and exciting changes to the 2011 NHSC Loan Repayment Program:

- Increase in Financial Support. NHSC members may now receive up to $60,000 in loan repayment for a full-time, two-year service commitment and up to $170,000 for a full-time, five-year service commitment. Members also have the option to completely eliminate their educational loan debt with additional years of service.
- More Flexible Options to Complete Service. The loan repayment program now offers three options for fulfilling the service obligation: A two-year, full-time contract, a four-year, half-time contract, and a two-year, half-time contract.
- Increased Credit for Teaching. The service obligation for clinical practice hours has been updated to include a 20 percent credit for teaching and a 50 percent credit for instruction at a Teaching Health Center.

And, for the first time, prospective Corps members can complete their application entirely online. Visit <http://nhsc.hrsa.gov/> for more information about the program.

NATIONAL STUDENT NURSES ASSOCIATION HOLD ANNUAL CAREER PLANNING CONFERENCE

The National Student Nurses' Association (NSNA) 28th Annual Career Planning Conference was held in Cincinnati, Ohio on November 4-7, 2010. Nursing students, faculty, exhibitors and alumni attended educational workshops, and listened to renowned speakers. Many attendees also had the opportunity to meet with the 2010-2011 NSNA Board of Directors.

Keynote speaker Joe Niemczura, RN, MSN, gave a key note address titled, "Be the Hero of Your Own Career." Mr. Niemczura is a national speaker, author, and nursing instructor at the University of Hawaii at Manoa. He imparted global nursing knowledge and encouraged the audience to take control of their own lives. For three summers, Niemczura volunteered his time as nursing faculty at the Tansen Nursing School in rural Nepal. From severe pediatric burns to victims of malaria, malnutrition, and human trafficking, his experiences are detailed in his latest book, The Hospital at the End of the World.

As the conference continued throughout the next two days, students attended the many sessions and workshops offered during the MidYear Conference: the NCLEX-RN® mini review course; a meeting of the Council of State Presidents; the two-part nursing specialty showcase highlighting nephrology nursing, infusion nursing, hospice and palliative nursing, pediatric nursing, nurse anesthesia and more; a variety of workshops on social networking,

ANA Files Amicus Brief in Court to Support Health Care Reform

In November, ANA filed an amicus (friend of the court) brief challenging several state officials' meritless claim that the landmark Affordable Care Act (ACA) violates the United States Constitution. The case, State of Florida et al. vs. U.S. Department of Health and Human Services et al., is pending in the U. S. District Court for the Northern District of Florida. The plaintiffs now include attorneys general and governors from 20 states. The issues in the case are whether the requirement that individuals carry health insurance and the expansion of Medicaid coverage to persons who earn up to 133% of the federal poverty level are constitutional.

ANA supports the constitutionality of the ACA, and in its amicus brief, provided information and its unique perspective on the necessity of the law's "minimum coverage provision." This provision will require individuals to carry health insurance when they would otherwise not have it through employment or programs such as Medicare or Medicaid.

The brief supports the constitutionality of the minimum coverage requirement based on the Necessary and Proper clause of the Constitution, which allows Congress to enact requirements that are necessary to support and make meaningful other aspects of the law that are adopted pursuant to Congress' other enumerated powers. The evidence cited by ANA makes it clear that the reforms of the ACA, such as prohibiting denial of health insurance based on pre-existing conditions, will not succeed unless insurance is more uniformly attained. States that have adopted insurance or health care reform without also adopting minimum coverage requirements have faced increasing premium rates. In contrast, Massachusetts has implemented reform along with a minimum coverage requirement, and premiums have been reduced.

Minimum coverage requirements are needed to spread risk and cost across the health care delivery system under ACA. ANA's members and registered nurses generally are acutely aware of the burdens on patients and the health care system when a lack of insurance delays or denies health care. An uninsured patient whose condition deteriorates because they are unable to afford less expensive preventive or early care will nonetheless ultimately receive expensive emergency treatment when that condition becomes critical.

The cost of this uncompensated care is then distributed to other patients or to government health programs such as Medicare or Medicaid. According to one study, this cost shifting adds, on average, $410 to each individual insurance premium and $1,100 to each family premium. There is also robust data demonstrating that uninsured patients' diminished access to care causes their medical conditions to deteriorate. For example, five-year survival rates for uninsured adults were significantly lower than for privately insured adults diagnosed with breast or colorectal cancer—two prevalent cancers for which there are effective screening tests and treatments demonstrated to improve survival.

The facts that ANA provided to the court underscore the validity of Congress' determination that the minimum coverage requirement is necessary to make reform meaningful. ANA's brief is available at <http://www.nursingworld.org/amicus-aca>.

resumé management, acing school exams, writing resolutions, and more. Students spent time networking and speaking with representatives from hospitals, schools of nursing, and other publishing and product companies. Attendees also had a great opportunity to bring their resumé and questions to meet with advisors in the NSNA Career Counseling Center, held during exhibiting hours.

PUBLIC RANKS NURSES AS MOST TRUSTED PROFESSION FOR 11TH TIME

For the 11th year, nurses were voted the most trusted profession in America in Gallup's annual survey that ranks professions for their honesty and ethical standards. Eighty-one percent of Americans believe nurses' honesty and ethical standards are either "high" or "very high."

"It's extremely gratifying to know that the public continues to hold the profession in such high esteem," remarked ANA President Karen J. Daley, PhD, MPH, RN, FAAN. "The public's high regard for the profession, coupled with nurses' education and skills, makes nurses well positioned to play a major role in the transformation of the nation's health care system."

Both the Accountable Care Act and the Institute of Medicine's recently released report on the Future of Nursing call for a larger role for nurses in providing patient-centered care in a reformed health care system.

Since being included in the Gallup poll in 1999, nurses have received the highest ranking every year except in 2001, when fire fighters received top honors. Results were based on telephone interviews with more than 1,000 adults.

ANA Launches New Immunization Education Program

ANA has launched a new immunization education program aimed at helping registered nurses discuss the benefits of vaccines with patients, families and fellow health care workers, and honored a registered nurse with an Immunity Award for dedication to increasing vaccination rates in marking National Influenza Vaccination Week, Dec. 5-11.

ANA and Every Child by Two, which advocates for timely immunization of the nation's children by age two, partnered to produce an educational webcast on vaccine safety, nurses' role in immunization promotion, and risk communications. The online production available to nurses nationwide for continuing education credit includes role-play video vignettes showing a nurse listening to and addressing a patient's concerns about vaccines in a clinical setting, and a nurse presenting a case for the importance of influenza vaccination to a peer. Materials, webcast and other information are available at www.anaimmunize.org.

The course and award are components of the ANA Bringing Immunity to Every Community project, a collaborative initiative with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) that focuses on maximizing nurses' role in increasing vaccination rates and reducing incidence of vaccine-preventable diseases. The two-year project seeks to increase nurses' knowledge and competency in immunization, encourage nurses to be vaccinated, and position nurses as leading advocates for immunization among peers, patients, and the public.

RNs can apply for the monthly ANA Immunity Award, either through self-nomination or nomination by a peer, online through Bringing Immunity to Every Community's website, www.ANAimmunize.org, a one-stop shop for resources nurses need to be competent, educated advocates for immunizations.

ANA Applauds the Launch of the Center for Innovation

The American Nurses Association (ANA) was proud to participate in an event to announce the launch of the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Innovation.

The Center for Innovation, a program funded by the Affordable Care Act through the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS), will test innovative approaches to improving health care delivery, payment and quality. Its ultimate goal is to lower health care costs while improving quality. The Center for Innovation will be testing care delivery models with a focus on certain criteria, many of which rely heavily on nurses:

- Patient-centered primary care
- Care settings beyond acute care
- Coordination of care, especially with targeted populations such as geriatric
- Interdisciplinary planning, care and communication

- Evaluation of appropriateness of services, chronic care management services and creating and disseminating patient decision-support tools

Nurse Managed Health Clinics (NMHCs) are a care model that ANA has touted as improving coordination of care, quality and efficiency. Recognizing the contributions of NMHCs, the Affordable Care Act authorized a $50 million dollar grant program to expand the reach of these clinics over the next four years.

NMHCs provide primary care, health education and preventive services that often serve low-income populations in underserved areas. If you are interested in learning more about innovative nurse-led programs, please visit the American Academy of Nursing's "Raise the Voice Campaign" at <http://www.aannet.org/i4a/pages/index.cfm?pageid=3301>.

ATTENTION WSNA BARGAINING UNIT MEMBERS:

Watch your Mail for the Ballot for the Special Election for WSNA Delegates to the 2011 NFN National Federation Assembly.

The National Federation of Nurses (NFN) will hold its first meeting of the National Federation Assembly (NFA) on May 15-17, 2011 in Chicago, IL. The purposes of the NFA are to elect the national NFN officers, consider resolutions consistent with the NFN purposes and goals, and to consider any proposed changes to the NFN Constitution. Based on membership, WSNA is entitled to six delegates to the 2011 NFA.

Because of the timing, a special mailed ballot election is being held for WSNA delegates and alternates to the 2011 NFA. Delegates and alternates will be determined in order of the number of votes received. The ballot will be mailed out in January 2011 and ballots will be counted February 15, 2011. Write-in votes for eligible members will be accepted.

Only WSNA members who are currently members of a WSNA Bargaining Unit may run for NFA delegate and only WSNA members who are members of a WSNA bargaining unit shall vote for delegates. To serve as an NFN delegate, a person shall hold current membership in the WSNA and be represented for collective bargaining by WSNA.

Following the 2011 NFA meeting, the NFA will meet every two years. WSNA delegates to the 2013 NFN National Federation Assembly will be elected by mailed ballot in May 2011 at the same time as other WSNA elections.

NFN SHEDS LIGHT ON THE ISSUE OF PSYCHOLOGICAL VIOLENCE

The problem of violence against nurses is no longer confined to physical harm. Psychological harassment and intimidation happens all too often between nurses and is affecting the profession and patient health.

In a letter published today in the Times Union (Albany, New York), National Federation of Nurses (NF) President Barbara Crane, RN, encourages health care administrators and lawmakers to expand their definition of violence to include psychological violence and do all they can to protect nurses from both forms.

WSNA is an affiliate member of NFN and works collaboratively with the national union to achieve policy outcomes that address issues most critical to our membership.

This trend is worsening an already severe nursing shortage across the country by deterring potential nurses and pushing good nurses out. It also affects patients' health. Nurses can't do their job well when they are being shunned, ostracized or belittled.

The issue of violence against nurses — both physical and horizontal — is one of NFN's two policy priorities. Currently, NFN is working to support Ohio Nurses Association in passing similar legislation to New York's new law.

NFN PRESIDENT JOINS ALLIANCE FOR ETHICAL INTERNATIONAL RECRUITMENT PRACTICES

NFN President Barbara Crane, RN, has joined the Board of Directors for the Alliance for Ethical International Recruitment Practices (www.fairinternationalrecruitment.org), a national nonprofit working to ensure that the recruitment of foreign-educated nurses to the United States is ethical and transparent.

While migration of health workers is an inevitable and potentially mutually beneficial part of globalization, concerns have been raised around the world about the active recruitment of foreign-educated nurses. These concerns include the impact of this activity on source countries' health systems, the labor rights of nurses being recruited and the adequacy of clinical and cultural orientation programs once they arrive in the United States.

Working for safe and equitable working conditions for nurses—whether they are native to the United States or educated abroad—is at the core of NFN's advocacy work. An essential component of workplace safety is ensuring health care settings are adequately staffed. While international recruitment may be part of the solution to implementing safe staffing standards, NFN is committed to working with the Alliance to ensure these nurses—and all nurses—are afforded the rights and protections they need, and deserve, to do their job effectively and promote better patient outcomes.

The Alliance is governed by a multi-stakeholder board that includes six sectors: unions, professional associations, foreign nurse associations, employers, recruiters, and licensure and regulatory bodies. It was created to promote and monitor compliance of the Voluntary Code of Conduct for the Ethical Recruitment of Foreign-Educated Nurses to the United States.

The NFN is a founding member of the Alliance and a key partner in this work, helping to develop strategy and raise awareness among its nurse membership and nurses everywhere about this important issue. Stay tuned for additional updates on the Alliance's work and activities.

RWJF Holds Nursing Summit on IOM Report on the Future of Nursing and Plans for Implementation

On November 30 - December 1, 2010, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation held an invitational National Summit on Advancing Health through Nursing, in Washington, D.C. to discuss the implications of the recently released Institute of Medicine's (IOM) Report The Future of Nursing: Leading Change, Advancing Health (see related article in The Fall 2010 issue of The Washington Nurse). More than 500 participants attended the Summit and worked together to identify strategies for implementing the recommendations and overcoming the barriers to adopting them

At the same time, 45 states, including Washington, held local awareness meetings and joined the Summit meeting by live webinar. Thousands of other nurses tuned in on Twitter and via live chat on the Initiative on the Future of Nursing website.

To help continue the discussions and action planning from the Summit, several tools are available on the Initiative on the Future of Nursing website, including the achievements of the Summit webcast at <http://www.thefutureofnursing.org/Summit>. RWJF is inviting nurses to leave their thoughts and comments on the report and find more ways to get involved in the Initiative on the Future of Nursing: Campaign for Action by going to <http://thefutureofnursing.org/get-involved>

The 4 key messages in the IOM report are:

1. Nurses should practice to the full extent of their education and training.

2. Nurses should achieve higher levels of education and training through an improved education system that promotes seamless academic progression.
3. Nurses should be full partners, with physicians and other health professionals, in redesigning health care in the United States.
4. Effective workforce planning and policy making require better data collection and an improved information infrastructure.

ANA, WSNA and the national specialty nursing organizations have engaged in a wide range of activities over time that support the evidence-based recommendations of the IOM. ANA has posted a partial list of some of these efforts, keyed to each recommendation, on the ANA website at: <http://tinyurl.com/ANA-FutureofNursing>

WSNA and the Washington Center for Nursing are actively involved in evaluating the policy gaps that exist in Washington State and planning for implementation activities. Updates on these activities will be provided in future issues of The Washington Nurse and on the WSNA website.

Social Networking – Nursing Practice Implications

Social networking such as use of Facebook, Twitter, and MySpace is becoming the norm in today's world. There are, however, ethical and professional boundary issues emerging that potentially place the nurse at risk.

Many healthcare providers are using social networking systems including email to discuss patients, or even talk with patients. Text messaging patient information can indeed become a patient confidentiality and HIPAA violation, especially if messages are sent unencrypted. Text messages should not contain personal opinions about a patient, patient's family, other healthcare providers, or care being provided.

Some nurses, however, use texting to network regarding needed patient care advice. Texting typically employs the use of abbreviated terms, some of which can easily be misinterpreted, similar to issues of "unsafe abbreviations." While texting a patient's condition to another healthcare provider in order to obtain suggestions for recommended treatment might be useful, a summary of the text may not become a part of the medical record. Just as with phone consultations, it is important that the medical record reflect the conversation. Without such information, should a lawsuit be filed, the ability to defend a case may be compromised. Additionally, if the actual texting is shown to a jury, "the appearance of the message will often not be one of professionalism, but one of hasty, casual, incomplete consultations, and one that may be interpreted as unconcerned, flippant, and / or disrespectful of the patient" (Baker, 2010, p. 5-6).

Adding patients or being added to a patient's "my friends" on Facebook / LinkedIn / other social networking sites blurs the lines of professional boundaries. Posting pictures on web pages and networking sites can also place the nurse at risk. Nurses need to think about professional implications and the potential for discipline related to violations of standards of nursing conduct or practice (WAC 246-840-710).

Additionally, some employers as well as educational institutions are checking various social networking sites to locate more information about current and potential employees/students. According to a recent article published in American Nurse Today, “a recent Microsoft survey found that 70% of employers rejected job candidates after finding ‘unsuitable’ photos or ‘inappropriate comments’ (such as complaints about employers) on social networking sites used by applicants” (Trossman, 2010, p. 38).

These examples describe some of the ways that we use technology and the hazards that can accompany these new tools, but this is certainly not an exhaustive list. These are emerging issues that employers, employees, care providers and patients are still navigating. There are not yet any definitive guidelines.

To protect yourself and best serve your patients, be thoughtful and cautious in your online and text communications.

The Skills and Ills of Using Social Media: What you should know before you Tweet and set up a Facebook Page

Given these issues are becoming more prevalent, WSNA will be offering a Pre-Conference workshop on April 27th, immediately prior to our convention. Please plan to attend this important continuing nursing education offering to learn more about social networking and your practice!

Frequently Asked Questions on the New Continuing Competency Requirements

Why did the Nursing Commission develop such a continuing competency requirement?

The public expects nurses to practice with reasonable skill and safety throughout their career. The Nursing Care Quality Assurance Commission (NCQAC) is the agency responsible for protecting the public by regulating the competency and quality of nursing practice. NCQAC does this by establishing and monitoring licensure and standards of practice, continuing competency, and discipline (RCW 18.79.101).

At the present time, nurses demonstrate competency only when they are first licensed after graduating from an approved nursing program and passing the licensing examination (NCLEX). There is no mechanism in place currently for nurses to show that they are competent throughout their career. The Continuing Competency Program provides a foundation for nurses to document their current and ongoing competence.

I am a retired nurse, so am concerned about meeting the practice hour requirements. What are some activities I can use to “count” towards these practice hours?

- Volunteer hours at a community clinic
- Provide home care for a family member
- Flu shot clinics
- Parish nursing
- Blood pressure screening

Do all of my continuing education hours need to be ANCC approved?

No, they do not. You can use in-service hours, CPR renewal, other educational offerings, and academic coursework in addition to other educational options such as providing an educational presentation at a local meeting / organization.

My birthday is June 1st. Can I count practice and / or continuing education hours towards my requirements if those hours occur prior to my 2011 June birthday?

No. All the required hours begin with your 2011 birthday date. Nothing may be counted retro-actively.

What happens if I don't meet the active practice requirement?

Nurses who have not practiced for 36 months or more, or who have not met the 531 hour requirement in 36 months, may apply for Inactive license status. You may need to complete a commission-approved nurse refresher course or other commission-approved remediation prior to applying for an active license and returning to practice from inactive status

What happens if I don't comply?

The commission will first offer technical assistance for nurses found to be non-compliant. Nurses who continue to fail to meet the program's requirement will be subject to disciplinary action. This includes fines, completion of remedial activities and/or denial of re-licensure.

Speaker Spotlight

Norma M. Lang, PhD, RN, FAAN, FRCN

WSNA is excited to have noted nursing leader Norma Lang as our keynote speaker for the 2011 Convention. Dr. Lang will be giving an address on "Translating Research into Practice – Linking Quality, Safety, and Practice" and will also be facilitating a plenary session regarding illuminating pathways to nursing's future.

Currently, Dr. Lang is leading the "Knowledge-Based Nursing" Initiative (KBNI), a leading edge partnership among Aurora Health Care, Cerner Corporation, and University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee College of Nursing (ACW). The goal of the project is to accelerate and expand the use of knowledge and evidence in nursing practice through intelligent technology.

Variation in the quality of nursing care across countries, clinical settings, and populations is widely recognized. KBNI identifies, defines, facilitates and improves nurses' direct contributions to patient outcomes through the enhanced use of evidence based clinical care using intelligent clinical information systems.

Dr. Lang is a member of the Boards of the National Quality Forum (NQF) and the Commission on Graduates from Foreign Nursing Schools (CGFNS). She is a member of the Advisory Group for the NQF Executive Institute. She currently serves on the Joint Commission (JC) Evaluation Committee for the Codman awards and chairs the NQF/ JC selection committee for the Eisenberg Awards.

Make a Difference — Give to the WSNF

It's true! You can make a difference in someone's life by giving a gift to the Washington State Nurses Foundation (WSNF). Your gift will support students attending college, either to become an RN or to advance their education with a BSN, Master's or doctoral degree. We are all aware that tuition costs have been climbing much faster than inflation, especially in the past few years. Your gift will allow us to award scholarships to more students, and to give larger scholarships, all to very deserving students — our future nurses and future nurse leaders.

In a joint effort, a WSNF community service mini-grant can make a difference in your community! We make grants to nurses who are doing various community service or education projects. Are you interested in giving something back to your community? Design a community service project, then submit an application for funding of your project. Grants up to $500 are available. Your project could be the next one that the Foundation supports. We look forward to hearing from you!

Another way to make a difference in someone's life is to honor them with a gift to the Foundation. Do you have a nurse friend, colleague, or mentor who has made a difference in your life? Consider honoring them by making a donation to the Foundation in their honor. The Foundation will send the honoree a letter notifying them that you have honored them with a donation to WSNF (Note: donation amounts are confidential).

If you would like to target your donation to a specific fund, then select from the following:

- Etta B Cummings Emergency Assistance Fund
- May S Loomis Professional Development Fund
- Dolores Little Scholarship Fund
- Nursing Mini Grant Fund
- WSNF General Operations Fund

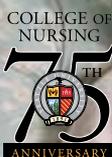

The mission of the WSNF, a 501(c)3 charitable foundation, is to promote the advancement of educational and professional excellence within nursing, and the health and well being of the citizens of Washington State.

Thank you to the following individuals and organizations who donated in 2010!

The 2011 Washington State Legislature is set to convene in Olympia on February 12th. This will be an especially challenging Legislative Session given the severe budget deficit the state is facing. WSNA has been working hard in the interim and will be a strong voice in Olympia as we move forward with the implementation of federal health reform, key nursing proposals such as protecting nursing education funding, ensuring uninterrupted meal and rest breaks, and protecting key health care programs and public health funding. Here is a preview of the legislative landscape and some key issues that WSNA will be focused on: ➡

Nursing's role in the Washington State budget crisis

Unprecedented shortfalls – unprecedented cuts

In 2007, we saw the beginning of the “Great Recession.” No one could predict how bad the state’s budget would be by 2010. Then, there was hope that the economy would pick up or that the state’s revenue structure would somehow change or improve to continue support of the most vital government programs.

As our economy has worsened, the need for public services increases. Yet the budget crisis continues to shrink the safety net. A poor economy places a greater importance on publicly funded programs.

For tens of thousands of families who work but do not have access to insurance through their employers, the Basic Health Program is the only affordable option. Yet the number of people on the Basic Health Plan has been reduced to 60,000 while 130,000 are on the waiting list. The Apple Health for Kids program provided health insurance for children when their parents are unable to provide it. The Disability Lifeline is the safety net program for adults who are unable to work because of a permanent disability.

For one single mom, without Maternity Support Services (MSS), she could not have had a healthy pregnancy and baby. MSS was her safety net while she looked for a job and got back up on her feet. Now employed, she is committed to speaking publicly in support of MSS.

Putting This Year in Perspective

For the 2007-2009 biennium, the deficit was “only” three billion. The size of a three billion dollar deficit meant that even if the state had shut down every community college and four year university, the state would still have a deficit in the neighborhood of a few million.

The outlook for the 2011-2013 biennium has worsened twofold compared to 2007-2009 with the shortfall ballooning to almost six billion dollars. Government spending is at its lowest in 30 years, and the growth rate of spending is zero percent.

The federal government and the state legislature did its best in the previous budget to temporarily patch holes by doing things such as using one-time federal aid, streamlining state funds, imposing furloughs and hiring freezes on public employees, and reducing funds for programs like Maternity Support Services and the Basic Health Plan. The next round of cuts will be substantial slices or eliminations of critical programs – there are no more accounting tricks or efficiencies to be squeezed out of the budget.

During the 2007-2009 biennium, it made sense to legislators to save government programs that had a federal match. For example, for every one state dollar invested in Maternity Support Services, the state receives two dollars from the federal government. The rationale was that not investing state dollars meant losing even more dollars in the form of federal funds. The shrinking infrastructure of state agencies, including the lay off of thousands of employees, resulted in an inability to even administer programs with a federal match. A shrinking state government in many instances means turning away federal dollars.

What is now at risk for Washington State:

Jobs. In health care, employers are reluctant to hire because funding sources that supported health programs (and health professionals who deliver the services) are drying up.

A booming nursing shortage. The suspension of health professions scholarships and more expensive tuition undermines the state’s ability to educate and train nurses. Prior to the recession, there were not enough slots to educate students who aspired to be nurses. With disappearing scholarship programs and skyrocketing tuition, a nursing education may be out of reach for even more students.

A weak workforce unable to support the local economy. Deficit created higher tuition and lack of tuition assistance is making higher education increasingly out of reach for any student. This threatens the ability of our state to develop a well-educated and trained workforce to sustain our local economy.

Uncontrolled communicable disease in our communities. Lack of support for a public health funding decreases our ability to control communicable disease and respond to sudden health threats like swine flu.

Unnecessary spending for health care. Emergency room visits will go up for those who do not have access to health care like Basic Health or Apple Health for Kids.

Uncontrolled preventable disease. Preventative services are often the first to be cut, leading to higher rates of preventable disease or poorly managed chronic disease such as diabetes.

Your voice as a nurse can help legislators make thoughtful decisions in Olympia

Come to Olympia to educate lawmakers about the impact of the cuts. Many public health nurses have volunteered to testify about the clients they serve and the consequences of a lack of services. WSNA will work with you to develop testimony, coach you, and be with you throughout the hearing process.

Visit your legislator. WSNA will give you the tools you need to identify your legislator, make a meeting, and prepare materials.

Attend Nurse Lobby Day on February 14th. Nurse Lobby Day is one of the largest events held in Olympia. Over 750 nurses and nursing students descend on the capitol to learn about the latest policy issues.

Use the advocacy tools on the WSNA legislative advocacy webpage at www.wsna.org/Political-Action

Vulnerability of Health Funding

Health and Human Services continues to be the most vulnerable and likely place to cut. Social and health services constitute almost 30% of the budget (www.governor.wa.gov/priorities/budget/faq.asp). Much of the remainder of the state budget is protected and cannot be cut, such as K-12 basic education funding (constitutionally protected), pensions, and debt service.

In 2010, the legislature put forward a revenue package to fill some of the widening gap, in the form of an $800 million dollar revenue package to apply the sales tax to candy, gum, and bottled water. The revenue package did raise about $800 million to fill the gap in health services, public health, education, and environmental conservation efforts, but unfortunately the fall elections have now taken us a step backwards again.

Impact of the Elections

The results of the 2010 elections present additional challenges to the state:

I-1107 repealed the tax on candy, gum, and bottled water. The beverage industry was the major promoter of the initiative, outspending opponents by tens of millions of dollars. This recreated $300 million of the state's budget gap. <http://bit.ly/gD1tKy>

I-1052, Tim Eynman's initiative, now requires a two thirds vote of the legislature to pass any measure that would increase the state's ability to increase revenue. However, only a simple majority vote is needed to create more tax loopholes for entities who can't claim to be short of cash. Many are passed by the legislature every year.

Several key champions of health and human services were defeated in the November elections. They include Dawn Morrell, RN, Randy Gordon, and Claudia Kauffman.

The Role of Nurses

Nurses have an opportunity to shape the state's response to the budget shortfall more than any other profession. Legislators welcome the opinion of nurses, the profession considered to be the most honest and ethical for the 11th year in a row according to Gallup's Honesty and Ethics survey.

Health industry leaders want more nurses to shape health policy due to their front-line perspective and lack of economic incentive or profit motive. A recent report from the Institute of Medicine titled The Future of Nursing: Leading Change, Advancing Health also emphasizes the need for nurses to be full partners, with physicians and other health professionals, in redesigning health care in the United States.

Indeed, the opportunity that comes with health reform is the only bright spot for many of Washington's legislators.

Taking action works. Due to advocacy efforts, the following programs have been taken off the table for elimination by the Governor as of the writing of this article:

- MSS was originally slated for elimination in March, and now is proposed for a reduction.
- Home hospice services is no longer slated for elimination.
- Medical interpretation services, originally slated for elimination, will continue until March of 2011. This gives enough time for the legislature to act and further protect that program.

We are eager to have you join us in Olympia to advocate for the rights of patients and their families throughout Washington. This will be a difficult year and now more than ever, we must have nurses' voices in the legislature.

Toxic Free Kids Act

Good News: We Are Making Progress

Washington State and Washington State nurses have led the nation in passing groundbreaking policies to protect children from toxic chemicals, including banning lead, phthalates and cadmium from many toys and children's products, banning Bisphenol A and toxic flame-retardants. In fact, this support again has led to federal legislation protecting children, but it is not enough. It is just the tip of the iceberg of harmful chemicals. We must continue to support legislation that protects children.

Recently, studies have found high levels of cancer-causing cadmium in McDonald's Shrek glasses and children's jewelry, the reproductive toxicant Bisphenol A in paper receipts, and lead in vinyl bounce houses. All of these chemicals have been linked to adverse health effects including cancer, reproductive problems, and learning disabilities. Parents shouldn't have to research a product, reading pages of literature (if the data is even available) to determine if a toy or product is safe. They should be able to take a product intended for a child right off the shelf and be assured that it IS safe.

There are over 80,000 chemicals in commerce today. We know the health effects of less than 1% of these chemicals. Banning one chemical at a time is not feasible and it is too slow. Our children and our children's children's health is at stake. Human health is at stake.

We cannot afford to wait any longer. The one-chemical at a time approach is too slow. It is time to end the toxic trouble once and for all by allowing the Department of Ecology to act quickly to reduce and eliminate harmful chemicals in kids' products when safer alternatives are available.

The Toxic-Free Kids Act Will Protect Children's Health by:

- Prioritizing chemicals we know are harmful to kids for reduction and phase-out.
- Authorizing the Department of Ecology to take action through rulemaking to reduce and eliminate toxic chemicals in children's products where there are safer alternatives.
- Requiring children's products manufacturers to find and use safer alternatives for harmful chemicals in products.

An Approach that Makes Sense

This act makes sound economic sense. Prevention is the most cost-effective way to deal with toxic chemicals that threaten our health and environment.

It is an efficient use of state agency resources. The most efficient way to get toxic chemicals out of products, kids, and the environment is to provide the Department of Ecology with clear authority and a streamlined process that will result in action.

We Should Not Stop Now!

Thanks to innovative solutions, mercury, toxic flame-retardants, lead, and other persistent toxic chemicals all are being phased out in the state. Soon, Washington will be the first state in the nation to require toy manufacturers to say what chemicals are in their products.

Breaks

Ensuring that nurses receive full, uninterrupted rest and meal breaks has been a priority for WSNA for the past several years and will again be the top priority in 2011. This issue is critical for nurses to maintain the alertness and focus required to provide safe and quality patient care. A growing body of research confirms what we've all learned from personal experience – fatigue experienced by nurses working long hours contributes to medical and medication errors.

Intermittent breaks, defined as brief interruptions in work activities DO NOT provide meaningful breaks. A "rest period" is intended to be an opportunity to completely stop work duties, exertions, or activities for personal rest and relaxation. Confering with colleagues and sitting down to chart are related to your nursing duties and cannot be viewed as a break. Activities like going to the bathroom or getting a drink of water also should not be characterized as rest or time away from work.

In preparation for the 2011 Legislation Session, we have been working hard to educate legislators about the importance of rest breaks and to correct some of the myths circulating about this bill. We've also been across the state hosting education sessions for our members about the latest information on fatigue and the impact of missed breaks. If you weren't able to attend one of these workshops, you can visit www.wsna.org/Political-Action for more information. WSNA is also pursuing this issue through other avenues, both challenging employers' rest breaks policies in the courts and working with the Department of Labor & Industries on rest break regulation.

With safety at stake, we need a statewide solution to this growing problem. WSNA will be engaged in a series of efforts to ensure that all nurses in Washington receive their full, uninterrupted rest breaks.

Public Health

Public health and public health nursing are the center of a quality health care system and the most cost effective system for disease prevention and health improvement. Public health is also our first line of defense in responding to natural and man-made disasters.

Washington's public health system is in jeopardy due to decades of neglect and erosion in public health spending. The ability of our local public health department to perform core functions has already been greatly reduced and further cuts in the public health system will jeopardize the health and safety of our communities.

Key programs like Maternity Support Services (MSS) are partially funded and operated by public health districts across the state. MSS helps at-risk moms in Washington State to have healthy babies. One out of every three pregnant women in our state receives MSS to supplement prenatal care. Health benefits of MSS include reducing the number of babies with long-term disabilities due to low birth weight and lower infant mortality rates. Maintaining MSS is a sound fiscal investment, avoiding expensive hospitalizations and long term adverse health outcomes. It's estimated that without MSS, preventable low birth weights will result in an estimated $5.3 million additional hospital costs in Washington each year. The program also brings in $48 million dollars of federal funds that will be lost if state funding is cut.

This is just one of the programs at risk if we slash public health funding. The important role of public health nurses and nursing services is even recognized in Washington law: "The legislature further finds that public health nurses and nursing services are an essential part of our public health system delivering evidence-based care and providing core services including prevention of illness, injury, or disability, the promotion of health, and maintenance of the health of populations."

Public health and public health nurses are a core component of our health care system, a system that we all count on to deal with such urgent issues as bioterrorism, disaster preparedness, food and water supply safety, and emerging diseases such as influenza, West Nile virus and tuberculosis.

Maintaining core funding for our public health system must be a top priority!

Nurse Advocacy in Safe Drug Disposal

"Take Back Your Meds" Bill

What is Take Back Your Meds?

WSNA continues to support a safe state funded drug disposal program. We have joined other health organizations, environmental groups, police, drugstores, and others demanding a statewide program for the safe return and disposal of leftover medicines.

- Safe means a secure and convenient system where residents can return leftover medications – throughout Washington.
- Safe also means the proper disposal of what are essentially toxic leftovers – and the only proven method is through high-temperature incineration.

Unused, leftover drugs are endangering our children, our families and going into the water supply threatening our health and the environment.

- Emergency room visits involving nonmedical use of narcotic pain relievers rose 111% from 2004 to 2008 (Drug Abuse Warning Network, 2010).
- Fatal poisonings in Washington State increased 395% from 1990 to 2006 (WA DOH, 2008).
- 85% of poisoning deaths involved medicines in 2006 (WA DOH, 2008).
- 32% of child poisoning deaths in Washington were caused by someone else's prescription medication and 26% were caused by over-the-counter medications (WA DOH, 2004).

Drugs in the Environment

Drugs that aren't properly disposed of will end up in our environment. The following drugs are found in surface, ground and marine waters as well as soils and sediments in the Pacific Northwest (multiple studies, see more info at www.takebackyourmeds.org/why/medicines-in-the-environment).

- Painkillers
- Antihistamines
- Antibiotics
- Heart medications
- Hormones

Bill Language

Drug manufacturers would establish and pay for the return program (collection, transportation, disposal) in every county statewide. The program would cover over-the-counter and prescription drugs (including controlled substances). It would also include households and residential sources (hospice services, nursing homes, schools, etc.).

Washington State with the help of nurses has pushed federal legislation

The Secure and Responsible Drug Disposal Act of 2010, S. 3397, signed by the President is a conference version of Rep. Jay Inslee's (D-WA) legislation, which passed the House earlier this year. In return, this bill will help local efforts in passing a safe drug disposal program.

The bill establishes programs for Americans to safely and responsibly dispose of unused or unwanted prescription drugs and controlled substances through community based efforts

Nurse Advocacy

This is a critical issue for nurses and we can use our powerful voice to advocate for safe drug disposal by attending WSNA Lobby Day and calling or emailing our legislators to tell them Washington State needs a funded safe way to dispose of medications. ■
